DID YOU KNOW?

Female gladiators, known as 'gladiatrices,' were a rare but fascinating spectacle in ancient Rome. Though less common than their male counterparts, these women fought in the arena, showcasing their strength and skill in combat. Evidence of female gladiators comes from historical texts, art, and archaeological finds, indicating they were both admired and controversial figures. Like the men, they battled for glory, freedom, and the entertainment of the crowds, leaving a legacy of defiance and bravery in a male-dominated arena.

LFC GOES HOLLYWOOD THIS SUMMER WITH GLADIATRIX!

Speaking of cool movies, LFC is excited to announce that their first feature film goes into production on August 12. Gladiatrix tells the story of female gladiators in the 3rd Century AD. Co-produced by LFC Films and Factory Film Studio, the $2M movie is based on the novel The Crescent by Vegas author Cynthia Vespia. Check out the Gladiatrix FaceBook page at
